From The Chronicler

January was a very special month in Krae Glas. We played host to the very auspicious 12th night coronation of King Felix and Queen Eva. Many people commented on how lovely the halls looked.

The weekends courts were peppered with awards and offerings. In between courts many activities were enjoyed, including heavy fighting, rapier and market stalls. The event was very successful. After this event our own Baron Cormac and Baroness Elspeth embarked on a tour of their lands. Which reportedly went well.

Unfortunately this meant they missed they next round of the twilight tournament. It was a unique event, with the heavies mounted on an elephant and giraffe. It was most entertaining to watch.

Read on, good gentles, for the full accounts from several reliable sources, including our own Seneschal.

12th Night Coronation special

The 12th of January dawned bright and sunny and not too hot; a small miracle in the middle of summer. By the time first court started people were enthusiastic and excited about the following proceedings.

Court opened with King Henri and Queen Beatrice giving out awards to much deserving people. The heralds have a full account of these. The list below is awards given to people within Krae Glas.

King Felix I and Queen Eva I accepting Fealty from the outgoing King and Queen.

Once the awards were completed, they gracefully handed over their crowns to the new King and Queen. The newly crowned King Felix and Queen Eva quickly gave out their first awards of their reign. They were most regal and elegant in address all before them.

Once first court ended, the crowd got to partake in lunch and socialising. The market stall was a lovely temptation for anyone with coin.

Second court set a unique tone for the day. King Felix settled into his new role, like a returning king. He reclined in his throne and dismissed people with a flick of his wrist. It was great to see a new king already so familiar with his people. Further awards were given out, and fealty sworn by all.

The afternoon saw many varying entertainments. There was the heavy fighting field, where the field was varied and wide. All stopped a moment to pay their respects to Gywnfor Lywd, who passed beyond the vale on the first of January. He will be missed.

The Rapier hands were also on the field. Goddard was being tested for his free scholar prize. He was most successful in this and we wish him well in future rapier endeavours.

Dinner surrounded the next court, and was a culinary delight. There was a soteltie for every table! The food was simply amazing and the cooks should not be forgotten.

Throughout the night we were entertained by jugglers and singing. There was a solemn moment, where again respects were paid for Gywnfor Lywd and his 3 miracles.

The night closed with a final court. And the way was cleared for the next day.

Sunday was cool and perfect for the outdoor setting of Hastings. Tents and sun shades were raised and the Merchant's avenue quickly set up. By 10:00 the celebrations were in full swing.

The atmosphere was casual, as spectators watched the Rose tournament and the rapier Provost tournament. Both were a wonderful display of arms.

For the A&S there was a display table from the guilds, including the "Worshipful Company of Broiderers of Lochac", which was a very beautiful display, indeed. There were sights and wonders for all involved.

Closing court ended a very beautiful event. The general consensus was that the weekend was a very well-run and elegant event.

12th night coronation special - Lochac Younglings

An account of the Youngling crowns.

The Children that attended 12th night also had a king and queen crowned. It was the very traditional method of finding dried peas in the 12th Night Cake.

The fortunate recipients, and Youngling King and Queen, were King Ashley and Queen Abigail. They sought the permission of Lochac's King Felix and Queen Eva to hold their own court while the Sunday activities occurred.

They did a fantastic job. They each appointed the appropriate help, including household and guard. They also performed an important service, by giving out the scavenger hunt awards, acquitting themselves with grace and nobility.

Youngling King Ashley and Queen Abigail, seeking permission to hold their own court.

The winners of the scavenger hunt were Finn (of the boys), with Abigail and Sofie tied for the girls. Queen Abigail graciously gave up the prize, a necklace, to Sofie, as she had been awarded a necklace by Queen Eva when she asked permission to run the kids' court.

Virtually all the kids who took part in the scavenger hunt successfully completed all 12 activities, including things like helping the kitchen out when asked, naming 3 parts of a fighter's kit and naming the new King and Queen. The scavenger hunt was designed so the kids would learn more about all aspects of the SCA. Anyone who completed it got a token with 12 pearls and a dolphin charm.

Additionally, The Haxey Hood game, which is another traditional 12th Night pastime, was well attended by kids and a few adults. They ended up playing best of 5 because they enjoyed it so much.

An account

The weekend started early, arriving at the hall to set up and watch the event unfold. As the decorations went up, I started to see all the hard work of everyone involved coalesce into the Kingdom event that is 12th night. Gonfolons adorned the wall, and those who came added their own personal heraldry to the overall atmosphere of the event.

The Kingdom of Lochac banner went up behind the stage, proudly displaying where we are from. Later in the evening when the lights were low, and the tables candlelit, the banner glowed from behind shining out over the populace.

Then the Lords and Ladies of the realm started to appear, dressed in their finest as befits a coronation of the King and Queen. Merchants set up their tables selling fine table crafts, books and miscellaneous wares.

Then the time had finally arrived, the preparations completed and it was time for Their Majesties, Queen Beatrice and King Henri to pass on the crowns to Crown Prince Felix and Princess Eva. First, accolades and awards were given out - their household was recognised for their service during the reign.

We witnessed the elevation of Teffania to the order of the Laurel, and Domhnall na Moicheirghe raised in rank to a Court Baron. Then it was time for their Majesties to step aside and crown their successors Felix and Eva, The court of von Danzig had begun.

The afternoon saw competitions and tourneys. Goddard fought his peers on the rapier field, each testing his skills, seeking out his weaknesses. He fought well, and long and his dedication and training paid well - the prize was his and he was elevated to Free Scholar.

A moving moment when Sir John Dai stood before the assembled fighters and dedicated the tourney to one whose passing has affected all - Gwynfor Lywd, and whose silk banner graced the tournament field that day in remembrance.

And while all this was occurring in sight of all, in the background preparations continued onwards in the kitchens, creating sustenance for all. A lunch of pasties, and platters of fruit all came our way. All the while roasting and baking continued for the feast later in the evening. I happened to glance in upon occasion, and to my pleasure the kitchen and volunteers were running with quick and smooth efficiency, all knowing their craft well, as well as knowing each other.

Tables were rolled in, the hall prepared for the nights feast. Candles were lit, and the High table prepared. Our first course appeared on the tables, and the buzz of conversation and the atmosphere in the hall took you back to times past.

A toast was made and stirring tribute to the "Mouth from the South" by Blodeuwedd. Impromptu singing, and juggling followed. Friends from afar caught up with those they only met occasionally. There were also chance encounters with people with the same interests; discussing their passions at length.

And that was just the first day! The next day, also broke early for everyone. We went down to Hastings, a little bleary eyed from the previous nights revels.

Tents were pitched, stalls raised for the market. Banners set in place and fluttering in the slight breeze. We were favoured with perfect weather, overcast and cool. A godsend to those taking to the lists fields.

The Rose tournament was held, with over twenty combatants entering the lists. His Excellency Baron Cormac managed to hold numbers and entrants in his head, much to my amazement. Our very own Theophilus was the first to face the new King and then shortly after the new Queen in her bouts, holding himself well against both opponents.

The rapier field also saw tournaments being run, but sadly I was too busy myself heralding the Rose Tournament that I did not witness much there.

An amazing weekends event, and a grateful thank you to the stewards and all those who made it so enjoyable.

Long live the King and Queen of Lochac

From my hand, this day February 01 AS 47
Martyn. Fairchild of Grenhamerton, Seneschal Krae Glas.

Summer Twilight Tournament Series

Round 2

Typical for a Summer Twilight Tourney, we had a wet evening, as is fairly traditional, but that did not deter a number of people turning up. It was pleasing to see a number of St Monica's members at the event, along with Krae Glas.

Gib and Lucas had recently returned from the crusades, and whilst they were relaxing around an Oasis somewhere in the Holy Lands, they came across two strange beasts. The first was large, grey and made an odd trumpeting sound. So, they killed it. The other was a tall beast, with an exceptionally long neck, it was most unusual to look upon. So they killed it.

They presented both these unusual hides to their Excellency's, but Baroness Elspeth advised they were only suitable to be used underfoot during a tournament, so the theme of the tourney was Holmgang, where each combatant was required to keep one part of their person on either the grey hide, or the speckled hide.

The lists were opened, and we had entering the tournament, his Excellency Cormac, a wayfarer to our shores- Lukas, Gib, Airden, Tobias and Theophilus. And what a tourney it was. Every round the hides upon the ground became a little more worn, and thus a little smaller to fight upon.

The eventual victor was Lucas, winning decisively. At the presentation of the winners tassel, he then gifted the token to his Excellency Cormac for his tenacity in staying on the hides. Cormac had fallen several times, but managed to always stay on the hide and prevail in each instance.

However, the evening is not only about the tournament. It is also an evening of entertainment. We had pieces of music from Paul, Madelina and ,as a duet, Maria and Theophilus. Tobias showed his musical aptitude of the bugle and Gilligan presented some wonderful filk. There were also the Krae Glas Junior players who presented a short play on, I think, vampires. The entertainment token was presented to Madelina and Paul.

The nights competition in food involved pickling dishes. Beth was awarded a token as winner.

In the final court for the evening, we saw the changeover of the Saint Monica's seneschal, as Antoinette has passed her office to Amy after several years of hard work. We extend our thanks to Antoinette, and welcome Amy and offer her and the College all the assistance the Barony can muster.

We also awarded Beth a Baronial Endorsement for her hard work and dedication to the Barony.

Finally, Theophilus was brought forward and recognised for being an example of what we wish to achieve - showing skill at arms on a tournament field, but also showing a more cultured side by performing musical pieces for everyone.

Thanks to the College for the venue and for all those who made it a memorable evening.

Yours In Service,
Martyn Fairchild of Grenhamerton, Seneschal Krae Glas

Round 3

The 3rd round of the Summer Twilight Series was fought on a beautiful evening. The evening started with much camaraderie. There was some excitement with regards to the A&S entries. Particularly Antoinette's heraldic display on her shield. She had painted up a beautifully detailed scene, of a knight slaying a pet dragon. She followed the time-honoured tradition of painting intricate detail onto a shield and then taking it into battle.

The theme for the tournament was preparation for the 4th crusade - The Battle for Constantinople. As such the fighters were required to be mounted. There were two options, an Elephant or a giraffe. Both were suited to the 4th crusade, as many exotic pelts came back from that crusade.

There were 3 fighters on the field, in a round robin format. Antoinette, Thorgrim & Theophilus. The fighters could either have their shield and remain seated on their mount, or they could leave their shield and hold on for dear life as the animal cavorted around the field. A mix was chosen and was a lot of fun to watch.

According to eyewitnesses, the giraffe was the final victor of the day. As for the fighters, the results were so close, that they are yet to be announced. They shall appear in the next Chronicle.

Hearsay

Certain members of the court of Krae Glas, long thought to be associated with the Black Dolphin, were in attendance at Twelfth Night. No doubt recruiting for their band of "Seafaring merchants".

Rumours abound as to the intentions of these oft-maligned sailors, are they truly acting in our best interests?

It seems that they have been quite successful in their guarding of our fair borders though, with a tithe of precious stones and pearls presented to their Excellencies in court.
